

ANAHUAC - TAWANTINSUYO UNITY IN CONTINENTAL DIVERSITY

Guillermo Marin

For thousands of years, peoples and cultures of the Abyanáhuac continent, from what is now Canada to Tierra del Fuego, constituted a single civilization that, isolated from its four contemporary civilizations of the Eurasian-African continent, e.g., Egypt, Mesopotamia, India and China, were able to maintain almost intact, their consciousness of being basis, as human beings and as a single civilization.

All peoples and cultures, different in time and space, were united by the same knowledge matrix, not only astronomical, mathematical, architectural, engineering, food, medical, but, most essential, united in human values and principles, which were manifested in many ways, but always maintaining the same root and essence basis that they shared over thousands of kilometers and thousands of years.

Because of the challenge posed by the natural barrier of the Darien Gap crossing, between what is now Panama and Colombia, two separate spaces of the same civilization developed. To the north, peoples and cultures of Anahuac, and to the south, peoples and cultures of Tawantinsuyo in the Andes Mountains. Contact between these two civilizing spaces was made through the sea. In fact, Columbus, in his voyage diary, states that on two occasions he found Mayan canoes at high seas with more than eighty oarsmen, which implies that the Mayans navigated the high seas, travelling from Yucatan to Cuba, and to Santo Domingo and so on, in a "bridge of small islands", until they reached the southern part of the continent between what is now Colombia and Venezuela.

Spanish invaders came from the Middle Ages and obscurantism, their adventure was not driven by a humanist or scientific spirit, on the contrary, they launched into this predatory enterprise by Venice bankers and the Vatican high hierarchy, the first seeking the incorporation of these vast territories and peoples for exploitation and depredation; and the Vatican's fundamental objective, the epistemic destruction of a civilization that threatened, because of its degree of wisdom and knowledge, the power generated by the ignorance imposed for ten centuries to the European peoples by the Holy Inquisition, where people of knowledge, their books and writings were burned alive.

The European invasion-occupation colonization Anahuac during the first three centuries had three dogmas; First, those discovered were not human beings; Second, they were violent, savage and cannibalistic; and Third, they were demonic and idolatrous. And the five colonization strategies involved amputation of five cultural elements: language, knowledge, memory, spaces and spirituality. These forced people to lose their consciousness of being, their historical responsibility and their dignity, all this, in order survive.

During the first invasion-occupation century, the demographic destruction was brutal and devastating. It is estimated that, of the approximately one hundred million people living on the Abyanáhuac continent before the invasion, the Spanish and Portuguese exterminated eighty million human beings. The extermination was due to diseases brought by Europeans, forced labor and massacres at the slightest provocation, to sow terror and impose the colonial process.

In the new colonial order, Europeans destroyed institutions, laws and authorities that had been established over more than three and a half thousand years in Tawantinsuyo and Anahuac. In their place they imposed, by blood and fire, new authorities, institutions and laws, but of a colonial character. These were not designed to maintain and promote the development of ancestral peoples and cultures, but on the contrary, their destruction, exploitation and depredation.

The Spanish crown divided the Abyanáhuac continent during the colonial period, into viceroyalties and captaincies, fragmenting ancestral societies and territories; adapting them to the invaders needs and internal policies. Upon achieving political independence, creole elites from the Spanish crown in the continent, created their own creole countries, "theirs and for them", excluding ancestral peoples and cultures, and atomizing, even more, what was left of the cultural regions.

For all these reasons, the continents ancestral people, have lost the awareness and certainty that we are one civilization, with many different peoples and cultures, but all united by a KNOWLEDGE

MATRIX, which was formed over 7500 years of through millions of people, and who developed an eccentric network of deep, amazing and diverse knowledge, but with a central knowledge matrix, from the systematic and reasoned observation of celestial mechanics and Mother Earth (Pachamama and Tonantzin), whose early efforts were dedicated to solving material challenges of maintaining life, communities and cultures, through food systems, health, education and community organization. Later on, the challenges of the existence transcendence in higher consciousness planes of energy.

This way of understanding human existence and of all living beings that accompany it, solving its challenges and seeking answers to its highest aspirations, is what has united us for thousands of years to all the peoples and cultures of the continent.

However, today, after five centuries of continental destruction and alienation of community conscience, creole neo-colonizers and their masters, owners of international money, try to make us believe that what unites us, the ancestral peoples and their children's children, is the Spanish language, the Catholic religion, the political party system, the market democracy and the Anglo-Saxon progress and consumption model.

Therefore, they call us Latin American or Ibero-American peoples, but that is another lie and imposition from neo-colonizers, because for them "America" is the United States and the Americans are their citizens. The creole plutocracies, which were created by elites of inept, corrupt and servile politicians and officials to foreign powers, and who have maintained the cultural colonization through their three levels of government, private initiatives and the media of all the banana countries. Systematically erasing the historical memory and ancestral cultural identity, so that people are alien to themselves, to their strongest, deepest and most vital roots.

But, above all, trying to erase consciousness of ancestral peoples and their heirs, the notion, security and strength, of all being one group of people, a single civilization, totally united in its marvelous and prodigal diversity, from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego, from the Inuit to the Mapuche people. This continental consciousness of unity, brotherhood and historical fraternity, which was built thousands of years before the European invasion, is one of the most important potentials to free ourselves from colonization.

When the Abyanáhuac continent people recover their millenary historical memory, their consciousness of being a single civilization, - because this will happen sooner rather than later, especially due to decline and collapse of Western civilization-, the children of the children of these prodigal and ancestral lands, will once again flourish and bear fruit to the new humanity that will be reborn after the human cataclysm at the end of the civilization of death, which today drags the darkest forces of humanity.

The values, principles and feelings that drove the continent civilizing process, which is one, however diverse it is manifested in its pluricultural, multilingual and multiethnic richness, will be reborn with greater strength. They never disappeared, simply went back to the depths of the souls and hearts of the wisdom and tradition guardians, who have always been there, waiting for the moment of their luminous revelation.

Therein lies the potential to recover ourselves, to wake up from this colonization and neo-colonization brutal nightmare, to be ourselves again, honoring our grandmothers and grandfathers, our peoples who have known how to resist the pain caused by oppression and temptation of their modern and predatory, comfortable and polluting life project.

Unity in diversity will once again be the bond that unites and strengthens us, as individuals, as peoples and as cultures.

Viceroyalties, captaincies, countries and economic regions will be left in the dustbin of history. The Eagle and the Condor will again fly high and will be guardians of our souls and hearts.

The future lies in awareness, responsibility, work and community democracy. The recovery of our people's dignity, towns and cultures is the task that we have to initiate. It will not be easy, inertia and miserable and backward souls will do their best to block this demand and need, not only for the people welfare, but also for the living beings that accompany us, our brothers and sisters in life and our beloved Mother.

Unity in diversity based on conscience, responsibility and dignity.
